Dear [REDACTED]

I'm dis-appointed to hear of your experiences, which sound very very wrong.

I can assure you that I would take the role very seriously and that I understand that responsibility for the process of resolving complaints will largely be under the remit of the PCC in future. I'd welcome your views on this - could be a good or a bad thing depending on the commitment of the relevant PCC?

The current PCC is an ex-assistant Chief Constable and has many years of experience as a police officer. I have no experience as a police officer but much of life and 17 years of representing local residents to organisations to get them a fair deal and see their priorities delivered and complaints resolved.

I believe that this election is a choice between the Conservatives and Labour in Cheshire and that Labour failed to win this seat back in 2012. I believe we can win the seat this time and will commit to a fair, open and transparent police service. I would welcome your support and would pledge to support you as a local resident.

Happy to chat further if you would like?

Bets regards

David
